April 2019

Dear Readers

This month has been quite sporadic with the Easter break, ANZAC Day and my fortnightly treatment regime. I managed to combine treatment with the Easter break and got to go and see the family in Bunbury, it was a cold, wet and windy experience.

I had the pleasure to attend Locky's and Don's investiture ceremony for their Order of Australia Medals held at Government House in Perth. The occasion was very regal with the Governor presenting each recipient independently with string music being performed followed by refreshments in the function room. I would estimate that about 200 people were in attendance. It must also be acknowledged that Mrs Dawn Gilchrest formally of Weedarrah/Bidgemia was also presented with an OAM. We are planning on holding a community function to acknowledge this marvellous achievement, a date has not been set as yet.

(Locky, Dawn & Don at Government House)

The ANZAC Day ceremony was held at the new memorial. We had the Police and the Army in attendance as well as a very healthy number of people wishing to participate in the service. Councillor Jim Caunt officiated proceedings with Councillor Alys McKeough, Jodie McTaggart, Major Tharmarajah and the Burringurrah Police Officers carrying out readings and other official duties. The Shire has received many positive comments about the new memorial, Dave Higgs and his crew have done a fantastic job and we now have a place of recognition that reflects the community of the Shire of Upper Gascoyne.

Council News

On Thursday the 26th of April 2019 after the ANZAC Day ceremony I hightailed it out to Mount Augustus to witness the marriage of Mr & Mrs David and Beth Hammarquist. The wedding ceremony was held on a lookout with Mount Augustus as the backdrop. Beth looked sensational in her beautiful wedding gown, David also scrubbed up okay as well. The wedding ceremony was performed by a Wedding Celebrant who was also a close family friend of the groom and bride's families and the words spoken were very apt for the occasion. After the ceremony we made our way back to the Mount where food, drinks and entertainment was provided for guests.

On Monday the 29th of April 2019 I attended the funeral of the late Mr Gary Pepper or more commonly known as 'Old Man'. The Funeral was held in Shark Bay with about 400 family and friends in attendance. As much as funerals can be it was a beautiful ceremony that celebrated the life of a larger than life person. Old Man worked in and around the Gascoyne for his father, Tom Pepper, mainly in the Pastoral sector.

The Shire have been successful in securing a grant to up-grade our existing Pavilion, we have received a grant of $50,000 towards an overall project of $139,000 to put verandas on each side of the Pavilion, install a ceiling inside and to fit reverse cycle air conditioners. This will make this facility more useable all year around. Interestingly the original drawings for this building did show a veranda on both sides of the structure.

We welcome Ally Watson to the team in her role as cleaner and assisting with the gardening. Ally is taking over from Diane Kempton who has decided to leave the Shire and work at the power station. We wish Dianne all the best and thank her for the great job she did when she was with the Shire.

Westline have completed line marking on the resealed section of bitumen around town including pedestrian crossings on Smith and Viveash Way in front of the pub. We have secured funding in next year's budget to install new footpaths which will complement the pedestrian crossings.

April is also budget setting time. Jarrod, Peter and I have worked together with RSM to put together to commence next year's budget, I believe it is going to be as tough if not tougher than last year's budget.

Unfortunately the fire truck was called upon to put out a fire at a local residence where a fifth wheeler was completely destroyed. Dave Higgs manned the unit ably assisted by the CEO, however there was not much that could be done to save the fifth wheeler. One of Junction Contracting's water trucks was used to ensure the fire did not spread any further.

MEDIA RELEASE

24 April 2019

Carnarvon celebrates another successful Gascoyne Dash

Member for North West Central Vince Catania congratulated the Gascoyne Off Road Racing Club (GORRC) on hosting another successful Coral Coast Helicopter Services Kickstarters Gascoyne Dash, and recognised the importance of the dedicated groups of volunteers and sponsors in providing quality regional events.

The annual Gascoyne Dash off road motorsport race was held over the Easter long weekend beginning with registrations and scrutiny on Thursday and culminating with the Awards dinner on Sunday evening.

The gruelling 400 kilometre off road race event between Carnarvon and Gascoyne Junction, challenges car against car and bike against bike with the fastest of each category competing against each other to determine who will be crowned the overall "King of the River" winner for 2019.

"Congratulations to the winners of each category, Shane and Curt Elphinstone (cars), Cody Upton (bikes) and Luke Gaisford (Quads), with Shane and Curt taking out the overall winners "King of the River" trophy by 11 seconds."

"With competitors racing across some of the harshest and remote country in Australia, all competitors must be congratulated for their participation and commitment, where winning is something and finishing is everything," said Mr Catania.

The success of the locally grown Gascoyne Dash, an off-road racing event held in the shires of Carnarvon and Gascoyne Junction, is dependent on a group of very dedicated volunteers who work tirelessly over many months on the requirements of the event, including logistics, course design and preparation, safety, administration, marketing and promotion.

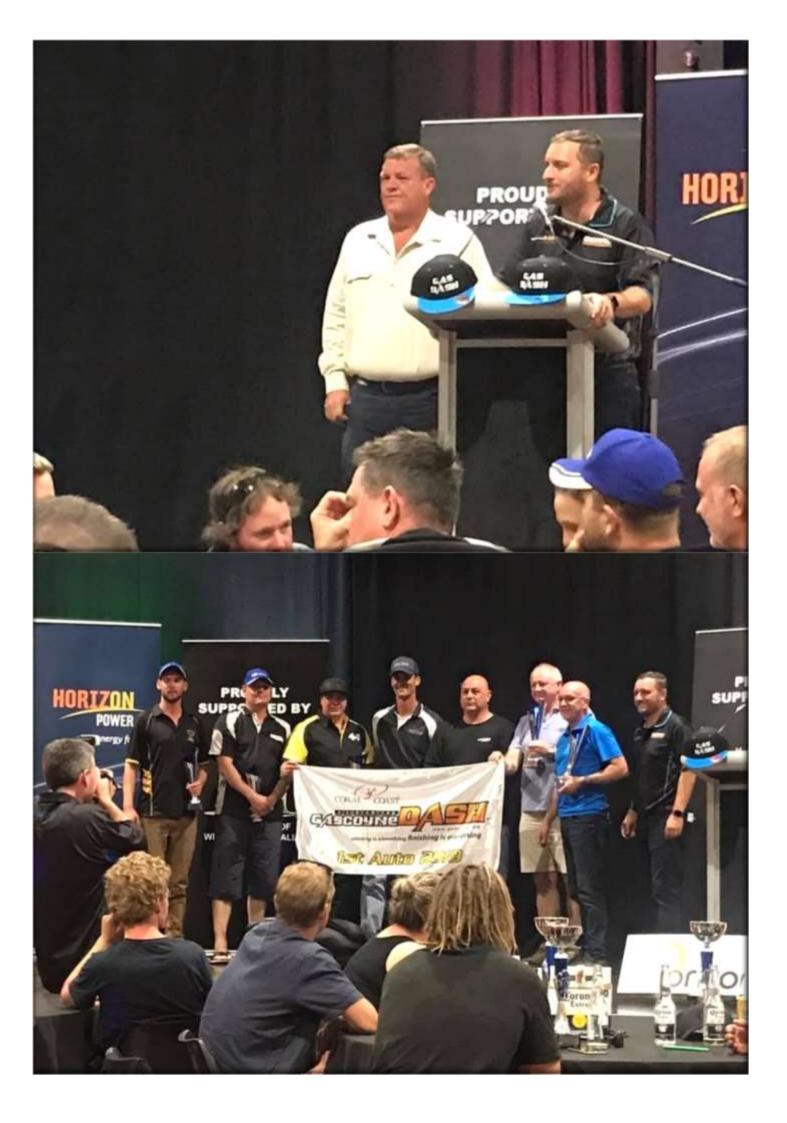

"I am particularly proud of how our local expertise and volunteers continue to work together with sponsors to help bring this world class event to the region, attracting competitors, supporters and visitors from across Australia and the world," said Mr Catania.

"Support for regional events is paramount in ensuring that our state tourism industry grows and local economies are stimulated, resulting in stronger communities and businesses."

End.

Australia's 2018 environmental scorecard: a dreadful year that demands action

Environmental news is rarely good. But even by those low standards, 2018 was especially bad. That is the main conclusion from Australia's Environment in 2018, the latest in an annual series of environmental condition reports, released today.

Every year, we analyse vast amounts of measurements from satellites and on-ground stations using algorithms and prediction models on a supercomputer. These volumes of data are turned into regional summary accounts that can be explored on our Australian Environment Explorer website. We interpret these data, along with other information from national and international reports, to assess how our environment is tracking.

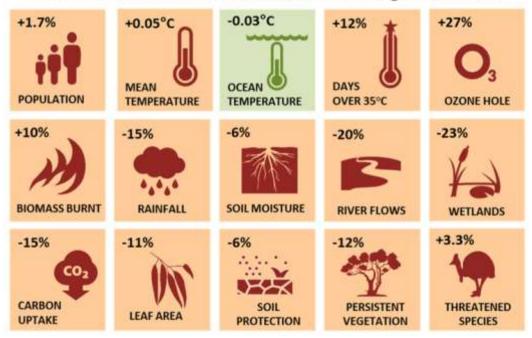

A bad year

Whereas 2017 was already quite bad, 2018 saw many indicators dip even further into the red.

Temperatures went up again, rainfall declined further, and the destruction of vegetation and ecosystems by drought, fire and land clearing continued. Soil moisture, rivers and wetlands all declined, and vegetation growth was poor.

In short, our environment took a beating in 2018, and that was even before the oppressive heatwaves, bushfires and Darling River fish kills of January 2019.

National environmental indicators: change from 2017

Indicators of Australia's environment in 2018 compared with the previous year. Similar to national economic indicators, they provide a summary but also hide regional variations, complex interactions and long-term context. source: http://www.ausenv.online/2018

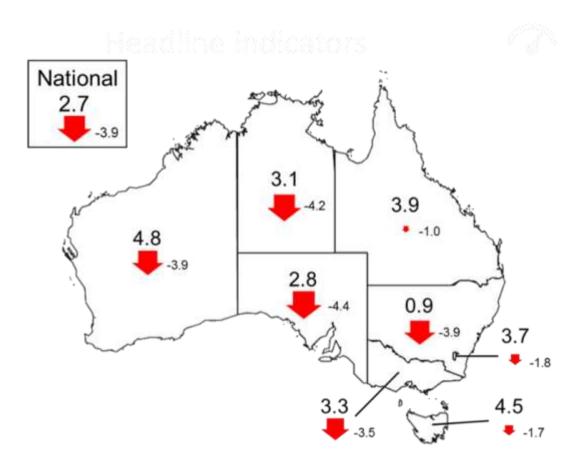

The combined pressures from habitat destruction, climate change, and invasive pests and diseases are taking their toll on our unique plants and animals. Another 54 species were added to the official list of threatened species, which now stands at 1,775. That is 47% more than 18 years ago and puts Australia among the world's worst performers in biodiversity protection. On the upside, the number of predator-proof islands or fenced-off reserves in Australia reached 188 in 2018, covering close to 2,500 square kilometres. They offer good prospects of saving at least 13 mammal species from extinction.

Globally, the increase of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere accelerated again after slowing down in 2017. Global air and ocean temperatures remained high, sea levels increased further, and even the ozone hole grew again, after shrinking during the previous two years.

Sea surface temperatures around Australia did not increase in 2018, but they nevertheless were well above long-term averages. Surveys of the Great Barrier Reef showed further declining health across the entire reef. An exceptional heatwave in late 2018 in Far North Queensland raised fears for yet another bout of coral bleaching, but this was averted when sudden massive downpours cooled surface waters.

The hot conditions did cause much damage to wildlife and vegetation, however, with spectacled flying foxes dropping dead from trees and fire ravaging what was once a tropical rainforest.

While previous environmental scorecards showed a mixed bag of regional impacts, 2018 was a poor year in all states and territories. Particularly badly hit was New South Wales, where after a second year of very poor rainfall, ecosy stems and communities reached crisis point. Least affected was southern Western Australia, which enjoyed relatively cool and wet conditions.

Environmental Condition Score in 2018 by state and territory, based on a combination of seven indicators. The large number is the score for 2017, the smaller number the change from the previous year. source: http://www.ausenv.online/2018

It was a poor year for nature and farmers alike, with growing conditions in grazing, irrigated agriculture and dryland cropping each declining by 17-20% at a national scale. The only upside was improved cropping conditions in WA, which mitigated the 34% decline elsewhere.

A bad start to 2019

Although it is too early for a full picture, the first months of 2019 continued as badly as 2018 ended. The 2018-19 summer broke heat records across the country by large margins, bushfires raged through Tasmania's forests, and a sudden turn in the hot weather killed scores of fish in the Darling River. The monsoon in northern Australia did not come until late January, the latest in decades, but then dumped a huge amount of rain on northern Queensland, flooding vast swathes of land.

It would be comforting to believe that our environment merely waxes and wanes with rainfall, and is resilient to yearly variations. To some extent, this is true. The current year may still turn wet and improve conditions, although a developing El Niño makes this less likely.

However, while we are good at acknowledging rapid changes, we are terrible at recognising slow, long-term ones. Underlying the yearly variations in weather is an unmistakable pattern of environmental decline that threatens our future.

What can we do about it?

Global warming is already with us, and strong action is required to avoid an even more dire future of rolling heatwaves and year-round bushfires. But while global climate change requires global action, there is a lot we can and have to do ourselves.

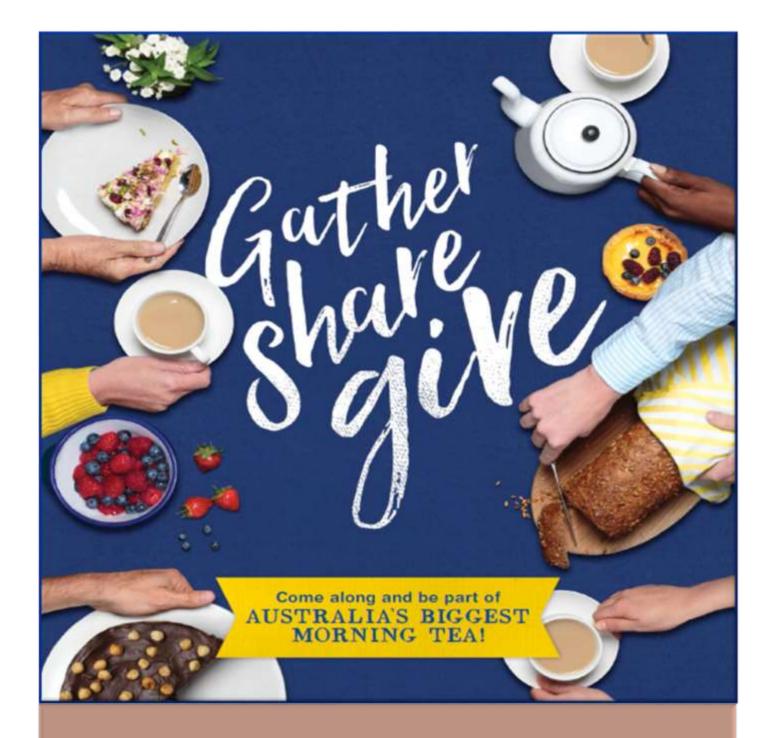

Australia is one of the world's most wasteful societies, and there are many opportunities to clean up our act. Achieving progress is not hard, and despite shrill protests from vested interests and the ideologically blind, taking action will not take away our prosperity. Home solar systems and more efficient transport can in fact save money. Our country has huge opportunities for renewable energy, which can potentially create thousands of jobs. Together, we can indeed reduce emissions "in a canter" – all it takes is some clear national leadership.

The ongoing destruction of natural vegetation is as damaging as it is unnecessary, and stopping it will bring a raft of benefits. Our rivers and wetlands are more than just a source of cheap irrigation for big businesses. With more effort, we can save many species from extinction. Our farmers play a vital role in caring for our country, and we need to support them better in doing so.

Our environment is our life support. It provides us our place to live, our food, health, livelihoods, culture and identity. To protect it is to protect ourselves.

PRINCIPAL'S POST

Good morning everyone and welcome to Term 2 I hope you all had a relaxing, fun Holiday/Easter break.

At the School Development day yesterday, staff shared information and discussed the impact recent professional learning opportunities have had on their current teaching practice.

Providing for individual students' needs and dealing with misconceptions in Mathematics were two areas discussed and will form the content for a parent forum in the near future.

Support staff reviewed and presented current research that provides the evidence underpinning school programmes and influences how to assist with changing student behaviour. Detailed explanation as to how the language programme is organised and the importance of whole school support was also shared.

I would like to thank all staff for their input to the day. Speaking publicly can be stressful but all were champions!!

Term 2 is lined up as a busy term. IT support personnel, NAPLAN, Gascoyne In May, Perth Camp, External School Review are all part of the extra-curricular activities that make for school business. In between, of course, is the day to day planning, teaching and assessing that staff work as a team to ensure engaging programme delivery for students.

I would like to send a sincere thank you to Rebecca and David Higgs for the time, effort and great fun they put into the Colour Fun Run last term! What a fun time we all had. Thanks too to Omo and Fred for the BBQ luncheon! And community support people also known as Di and Ken, Dorcus and wet baby, Kenny fast runner, Amanda, Blaise, staff and students.

'Til next time Chris Polakiewicz Principal

Main Course

Seafood lasagne

Ingredients

250 g (8 oz) instant lasagne sheets

125 g (4 oz) scallops

500 g (1 lb) raw medium prawns

500 g (1 lb) skinless white fish fillets

125 g (4 oz) butter

2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

1 leek, white part only, thinly sliced

3/3 cup (85 g/3 oz) plain flour

2 cups (500 ml/16 fl oz) milk

2 cups (500 ml/16 fl oz) dry white wine

125 g (4 oz) Cheddar, grated

1/2 cup (125 ml/4 fl oz) cream

60 g (2 oz) Parmesan, grated

2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Method

- 1. Preheat the oven to moderate 180°C (350°F/ Gas 4). Line a greased shallow ovenproof dish (about 30 cm/12 inches square) with lasagne sheets, gently breaking them to fill any gaps. Set aside.
- 2. Slice or pull off any vein, membrane or hard white muscle from the scallops, leaving any roe attached.
- 3. Peel the prawns and gently pull out the dark vein from each prawn back, starting at the head end. Chop the seafood into even-sized pieces.
- 4. Melt the butter in a large pan over low heat, add the leek and cook, stirring over medium heat for 1 minute, or until starting to soften. Stir in the flour and cook for 1 minute, or until pale and foaming. Remove from the heat and gradually stir in the combined milk and wine. Return to the heat and stir constantly over medium heat until the sauce boils and thickens. Reduce the heat and simmer for 2 minutes. Add the seafood and simmer for 1 minute. Remove from the heat and stir in the cheese and some salt and pepper.
- 5. Spoon half the seafood mixture over the lasagne sheets in the dish, then top with another layer of lasagne sheets. Spoon the remaining seafood mixture over the lasagne sheets, then cover with another layer of lasagne sheets.
- 6. Pour the cream over the top, then sprinkle with the combined Parmesan and parsley. Bake, uncovered, for 30 minutes, or until bubbling and golden brown.
